

Introducing our Editorial Board

ANDY HYDE

Andy Hyde has worked in STM publishing for over 15 years and has served on the Serials Editorial Board since 1996. He is currently a consultant working on health information and medical education resources. In a previous life he published and managed international medical journals with Churchill Livingstone in Edinburgh.

One of his first tasks when he arrived in Scotland during the early 1990s was to attend a conference on electronic publishing, where he was intrigued by a description of the Internet. He spent the next decade or so working with clinical and research communities, trying to make sense of what the online environment meant for the future of their journals in particular and for scholarly communication in general.

Now pursuing projects in an independent world, this interest has not really gone away (and neither has the question) and he continues to work with clients to develop new resources and new channels of communication.

Andy's interests are wide-ranging and he spends time pondering issues such as the potential of virtual communities, the future of open access provision and the rise of weblogs – sometimes all at the same time.

REBECCA LENZINI

Rebecca Lenzini can point to a professional lifetime in the world of serials. She began her career in libraries in 1974 in the Serials Department of the University of Illinois and is currently President of The Charleston Company, publisher of The Charleston Advisor and The Charleston Report (a bi-monthly newsletter devoted to libraries and publishing).

The company is also co-sponsor of the Fiesole Collection Development Retreat series which brings together colleagues from around the world to discuss the 'New World Order' in publishing, collecting and serving users of scholarly information.

Lenzini was Vice President and Director of The Faxon Company's Academic Division during the 1980s and has served as President of CARL Corporation. She is one of the founders of UnCover, the original article retrieval and document delivery service introduced in 1988 and now a part of Ingenta.

Rebecca is happy to be contributing to the UKSG as part of the Serials Editorial Board. She wants to remind readers that she was actually a speaker at the 10th Anniversary UKSG conference, held in Oxford.

In her spare time, Rebecca likes to hike and camp in the Colorado rockies. She is also a supporter of gymnastics for young women. She has two daughters – Sarah (26) is an editor for Facts and Comparisons; Anne (19), a sophomore at the University of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Washington, spent last summer working in Edinburgh, Scotland. It was hard to get her to come back to the US.
